Historic Monuments of Northern Ireland

Historic Environment Division identifies, protects, records, investigates and presents Northern Ireland's heritage of archaeological and historic sites and monuments. The Department has statutory responsibility for the sites and monuments in this list which are protected under Article 3 of the Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (NI) Order 1995. They are listed in alphabetical order of townland name within each county. Linear earthworks and canal related features are listed at the end of each county.

The Schedule of Historic Monuments at April 2022

This Schedule is compiled and maintained by the Department and is available for public consultation at the Historic Environment Record of Northern Ireland. Additions and amendments are made throughout each year and this list supersedes all previously issued lists. To date there are 2019 scheduled historic monuments.

It is an offence to damage a scheduled site in any way. No works should be planned or undertaken at the sites listed here without first consulting with Historic Environment Division and obtaining any necessary Scheduled Monument Consent. The unique reference number for each site is in the last column of each entry and should be quoted in all correspondence, along with the county.

Where sites are State Care and also have a scheduled area they are demarcated with an asterisk in this list

The work of scheduling is ongoing, and the fact that a site is not in this list does not diminish its unique archaeological importance. The Northern Ireland Sites and Monuments

Record (NISMR) has information on some 17,000 sites of which this scheduled list is about 12% at present. There is a separate Industrial Heritage Record of some 16,500 entries, a Maritime Record, Defence Heritage Record and a Historic Gardens Register, all of which may appear as references in the schedule from time to time. These Records may be consulted by the public through the Historic Environment Record of Northern Ireland at

An electronic version of NISMR and a web mapping application are available on

Most scheduled monuments are privately owned and are not normally accessible to the public.

Site Protection

While the contents of the list are not confidential it should not be used as pointers to sites for unlicensed treasure-hunting, which is strictly illegal under The Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. All searching for archaeological objects without a licence is an offence and it is also an offence to be in possession of a detection device on a protected site. Any third party enquiries about the location of archaeological sites should be referred to Historic Environment Division unless you are completely satisfied as to the enquirer's motives.
